

aikona flooring

it could be wood

Aikona is a realistic and practical alternative to traditional wooden flooring. This innovative material is water repellent, u.v. stable and has an attractive non-slip textured surface.

Aikona flooring is manufactured from a rigid vinyl composite to look and feel like natural wood. Since it can withstand exposure to sunlight, water and other environmental conditions it is suitable for both wet internal areas and external applications.

When compared to wooden flooring or decking, Aikona has many advantages. Aikona's non-slip surface remains effective even when wet. It is also resilient to impact and abrasion.

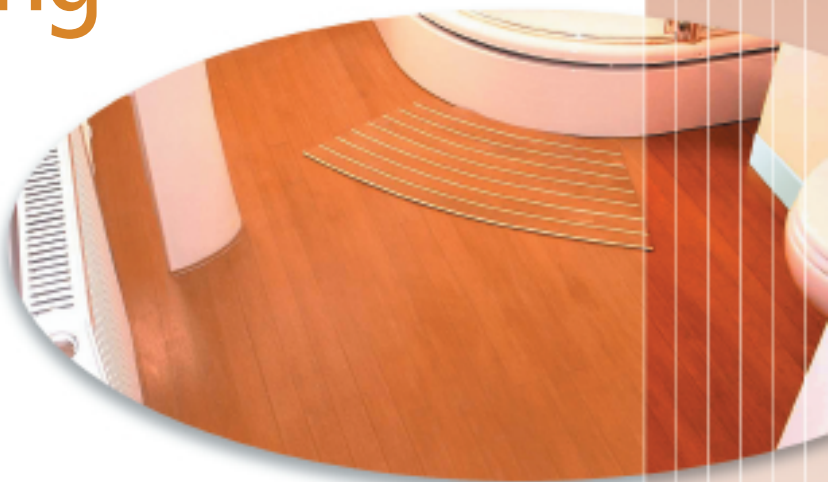

Aikona is recommended where water or weathering would cause a wooden floor to deteriorate. It is suitable for both domestic and commercial use, for a wide variety of applications including:

- bathrooms
- kitchens
- swimming pools
- balconies
- conservatories
- public walkways
- marina pontoons.

Varnishing will give the Aikona floor a more polished appearance for dry areas, although this may reduce its non-slip qualities.

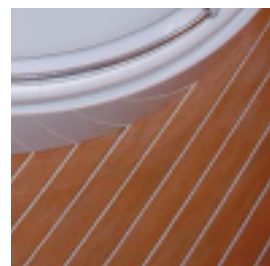

Aikona has many advantages:

- resilient to water and sunlight
- slip resistant, even when wet (BS 7976-2:2002)
- fire resistant: performance B_{FL}- s1 (classified in accordance with EN 13501-1) and M3
- retains the original look and feel of new wood
- simple to maintain and quick to clean
- easy to cut and install.

Aikona planks are supplied either plain or with a caulking stripe, in a choice of lengths and widths.

For further information, please refer to Aikona's specification sheet and Aikona's installation and maintenance guide. Aikona distributors and agents can also offer recommended adhesives and installation services if required.

Aikona flooring is a fantastic material. It has excellent durability and resilience to water and sun, making it an extremely good alternative to wood.
